MEMORANDUM.

The Library of the Surgeon General's Office may be said to date from the late war, at the commencement of which it consisted of about 350 volumes of text-books and journals.

In October, 1865, as appears by a pamphlet catalogue of that date, the number of volumes was about 1,800, and since that time the increase by donation, exchange, and purchase has been steady and rapid; the present catalogue containing about 13,000 titles, including 13,330 volumes.

The object kept in view in the formation of the Library has been to obtain publications relating to—

1. Military hygiene, medicine, and surgery.
2. Public hygiene, medical police, and state medicine, including epidemics and quarantine.
3. Vital and medical statistics.
4. Medical and scientific journals and periodical literature.
5. Chemistry, meteorology, and physics.

As will be seen by the catalogue, a good foundation has been made for a library relating to the above subjects; but it is still very far from being complete.

That there is need in this country of a medical library of this character is sufficiently evident from the fact that, in all the public medical libraries of the United States put together, it would not be possible to verify from the original authorities the references given by standard English or German authors, such as Hennen, Reynolds, or Virchow. No complete collection of American medical literature is in existence; and the most complete, if in this country, is in private hands, and not accessible to the public; while every year adds to the difficulty of forming such a collection as the Government should possess. The books are now safely and conveniently arranged in the fire-proof building of the Army Medical Museum, and are accessible to the public under rules and regulations essentially the same as those for the Library of Congress.

It, in fact, forms a highly desirable, and, indeed, necessary supplement to the Congressional Library, and is catalogued in the same manner, the principle being to give a literal transcript of the title-page of each work, omitting titles of authors.

The alphabetical index of subjects is not intended to be complete. It includes only works readily classified, and subjects relating to which two or more works are in the Library.

Prepared and printed within six months, to meet a want which daily became more pressing, errors have been inevitable, especially those of omission. It is hoped that a corrected and much enlarged edition will be needed and can be prepared within a very few years.

Plague. A collection of very valuable and scarce pieces relating to the last plague in the year 1665, viz: 1. Orders drawn up and published by the lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London, to prevent the spreading of the infection; 2. An account of the first rise, progress, symptoms, and cure of the plague, being the substance of a letter from Doctor Hodges to a person of quality; 3. Necessary directions for the prevention and cure of the plague, with divers remedies of small charge, by the College of Physicians; 4. Reflections on the weekly bills of mortality, so far as they relate to all the plagues which have happened in London from the year 1592 to the great plague in 1665, and some other particular diseases. With a preface, shewing the usefulness of this collection, some errors of Dr. Mead and his misrepresentations of Dr. Hodges and some authors, to which is added an account of the plague at Naples in 1656, of which there died in one day 20,000 persons, with the symptoms that appeared upon dissection, and the approved method of cure. 2d ed. 88 pp. 8°. *London, J.
